

speaking twice on probably anything else tonight, but I...some of the things said I would feel compelled to respond to so the body is not...just had not...I'm not going to say, say it both sides of the story, let's put it that way. I mean, as far as Senator Wesely's comments about the other money not being spent, I mean, obviously, there's nothing...our motion before us is strictly whether to put it back in or not and there's no such thing as placing intent language to say anything of the matter that says that it can't be spent. If it's in, it's in, and it can be spent for that and it's, you know, that's even more of a "trust me" than the other one because, I mean, they have total authority to spend that money. And I guess I'm not questioning anyone's credentials but, I mean, that's...I've got a bridge I will sell you too somewhere and that's one of those things that the money is there, particularly in this case, I mean, the money is there for a very worthwhile program. I'm not going to deny that. It's awful hard to...just because a couple members of the body in the record say they don't want it to be spent, I would suggest that it will be. Secondly, as far as the issue of the school lunch money and the possibility of making this revenue neutral, that's another giant leap of faith across the Platte River with one leg, to tell you the truth, because what you're talking about there is if they were in the same program, we could simply do that and possibly it could occur. But these are items in different programs. The Department of Education could not transfer that money in any way, shape or form. And so if you override this veto, the total of 933,000 or whatever, 920,000 or whatever the number is, is added to the budget, period, period. I mean, you cannot...if it was not the last day, if this was on Select File and we could go back in and decrease by like amount the school lunch, we cannot do that at this point in time. Now, yes, that school lunch money may not be spent but, obviously, next year it would take an action by this body to move it from the program. And the chance of that happening, there is a chance that would happen, I'm not going to say it won't happen, but I'm just saying that that's a...you know, it's hard to say here today that we can do this without costing money and, you know, it's certainly for as we look at things in the hours to come and between now and next regular session it does cost us money and it does have to come up from someplace...from somebody else because that 3 percent reserve cannot be ignored. Now, if we were on Select File, some of these things could occur. We're not. We're on Final Reading and before us we only have the one item of putting it back in. If we vote for it, it all goes back in. And I would argue that
